HOLLAND-GROWN FLOWER BULBS

DEAR FRIENDS:

It is with great pleasure that we hand you herewith our price-list for imported Holland Bulbs, which shows some of the pre-war varieties still in their glory, but also that many of the old time varieties have disappeared to make room for newer and better ones.

During the war, we have succeeded in supplying the trade with Flowerbulbs gathered from all parts of the globe not occupied by the enemy. At that time, the selection of varieties was very limited. We are glad to have the opportunity again to offer you an extensive list.

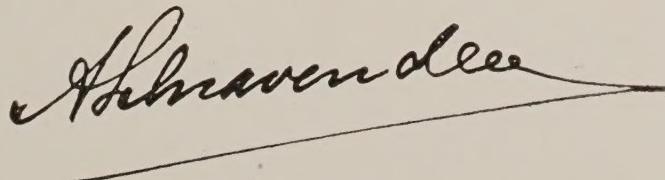

It has been a few years since many of our customers forced bulbs, and we have therefore taken pains to give all information we have regarding the time these bulbs can be forced and the treatment they need.

It is our intention to continue our trials in the forcing of many of the newer varieties annually in the United States, so that we can serve our customers with regard to the usefulness and the treatment of these varieties.

Segers Brothers of New York Inc., have not been able to come to an agreement with the firm of that name in Holland, and our ways have parted. We considered it fair to give the Holland firm their name back, and have decided to change our name at New York by May 31st, 1946, to Schravendeel & Segers Sons, Inc. Successors to Segers Brothers of New York Inc. Mr. Schravendeel has been the power behind the Segers trade in America for the last 36 years and he will continue to look after your interests as in the past, under our new name.

Very sincerely yours

SCHRAVENDEEL & SEGERS SONS, INC.

Many of these varieties are very adaptable for forcing for cut flowers during the month of January. They should never be grown in the dark, as they will produce nice flowers on fairly tall stems, even at this early date. They need only about three weeks from the time they are placed in the greenhouse until they flower. Temperature recommended about 70 degrees Fahrenheit.
